Zam

“This is a Zam communicator. This is a device that is good for people who are non-verbal, so if somebody, say in the hospital for a procedure or something or you have a family member that has tubes or something and they are unable to speak, this is a good way for them to communicate with their doctors, their family, whoever is there. It’s got two sides the first side is just the simple alphabet and it also has some buttons for doctor, nurse, family, toilet, pain, hot, cold, yes, no, and thank you. So if the family member or the doctor needs to communicate with somebody who isn’t verbal then they can use these commands to answer the doctor’s questions or the family’s questions. And the screen also is adjustable and it turns and when you type something it will show up across the screen. That way you can see what the patient is saying. On this other side this is especially good for doctors and nurses because the person can point to their body part if something is hurting them and they can say what kind of pain they are having. They can also give different types of activities if they are feeling dizzy, if they can’t breathe, it they’re thirsty, if they want to watch TV. So this is a real helpful tool for people who are non-verbal. We have several of these and if somebody is needed one for a family member or somebody that they know, they can just contact us and we can get them one for free.”
