Dr. Lakshmi Mahadevan: Welcome to part two of our Webcast on a Center for Independent Living. As we mentioned before, a Center for Independent Living, or a CIL, provides independent living skills training. Why this focus on independent living? Because independent living skills training entails helping an individual with a disability to live by their own rules, make their own choices about all aspects of their life, such as where they go, where they live, how they support themselves, how they receive health care, how they manage to procure any help they might need to do all of these things. In this webcast we will provide you an overview of how you, as CTE teachers, can incorporate independent living skills training into your everyday curriculum activities. We recommend that you do this by using specific instructional strategies that allow students to hone their post-secondary skills in your everyday classroom.
